peror Nicholas has endorsed seneme for the revival of zemsky zabor, or ancient land parliament, has spread through the city and created intense satisfac-tion among the liberal classes. The wspapers this morning were filled with articles descriptive of this ancient Russian institution, indicating that word had gone forth that the government had decided to listen to the voice of representatives of the people. Naturally there is some skepticism as to whether the government intends frankly to take the step; but the general verdict is that if the emperor has succeeded in shaking off reactionary influences and now proceeds in good faith to summon the zemsky zabor, he will rally to his support the moderate liberals and perhaps arouse a wave of genuine enthusiasm in the country. Liberal are convinced that a meeting of such a body must be followed by reforms.

Herr Kossuth declared that he came to Vienna with the purpose and in the hope of convincing the emperor that no party exists in Hungary, desiring to separate the interests of Hungary from those of the House of Hapsburg; that the independence party is most loyal, and that Hungary will become the strongest prop of the dynasty if it were permitted to have free and untrammeled development. He says further that when the independence party's programme is realized all differences between Austria and Hungary will disappear. Treaty Matter.

CHANGES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—John W. Foster, president of the national arbitration conference, which has been conducting an active propaganda in behalf of arbitration of international disputes, today made the following statement bearing on the action of the senate in amending the arbi-tration treaties between the United States and eight European governments:

Mr. Foster said he was greatly disappointed at the result so far attained in the effort to commit the United States to the principle of arbitraion. He had labored to secure the approval of the treaties by ithe senate without amendment because he considered the word agreement in article 2 of the conventions as having the same sign word agreement in article 2 of the conventions as having the same significance in international law as the word treaty. But when this matter was brought into doubt, he regarded the senate as justified in making this the senate as justified in making this selear by amendment, as he never contemplated the president would have the power under the treaties to make an agreement to submit a case to The Hague court without the advice of the co-ordinate branch of the treaty-making research.

In Roosevelt's Hands.

It is most unfortunate that there should arise an apparent divergence of views between the executive and the senate. The matter is now in the senate. The matter is now in the hands of the president, and Mr. Foster said he had great confidence that that statesman who had shown himself the most ardent friend of arbitration and had brought the warring nations in the Venezuela trouble to The Hague, and thus rendered the cause of arbitration that the greatest service of the contraction of the greatest service of the contraction of the greatest service of the contraction of the greatest service of the contraction the greatest service of the contraction of the greatest service of the contraction the greatest service of the contraction that the greatest service of the contraction the greatest service of the contraction that the greatest service of the contraction that the greatest service of the contraction that the greatest service of the contraction of the greatest service of the arbitration the greatest service of any man of his generation, would find a way to reconcile the existing differ-ences and save the United States from becoming the most backward of the nations in the cause of international

I know the president and secretary of state are just as clear and honest in their convictions as the senate if. The senate might adopt a rule to give specific treaties submitted instant consideration, and then foreign powers would not have to wait. Surely something can be done that will harmonize the two parties anxious to promote the the two parties anxious to promote the same noble end. CARNEGIE."
